CLASS WØR

another fucking royal PARASITE
In 1984 Britain youngsters and adults scavenge on a stinking, festering municipal tip in a bid to keep body and soul together.

IT'S A BOY!

Once again the same old headlines are plastered across the front pages of all the dailies, 'we are confronted by special features in all the glossy magazines... all of them tell us we should celebrate, celebrate the birth of the Prince of Wales.'

But why should we celebrate, this bullshit has no bearing on our lives. Just another 'royal' born ready to sponge off us for the rest of his life.

It's obscene that we should be told to celebrate the birth of one into a privileged world where they die each year because they can't afford a decent meal, or for the sham weddings they are forced to call home.

It's an insult for the millions of ordinary people in this country who slog their guts out for fifty years with nothing to look forward to but a pathetic pension that will keep them in poverty for the rest of their days.

No we won't celebrate, we won't celebrate till the last royal, the last law maker, the last vestige of the bosses, have all been pulled from their position of power and priviledge and we are finally free.

Why not rip the state off? They've ripped off our whole lives. You may need safe I.U. to cash the giro with it is possible to get a service saving in the system with no I.U. and a couple of quid. But the G.P.O. are putting a stop to that somehow asking for I.U. because you have money, and can lead to a driving licence and passport etc. that takes name, but that, like the rest of the savings book, is another story.

Adapted from "VOCATIONS ECONOMIC COLLAPSE OF THE CAPITALIST STATE...".

GET THE MOST FROM THE DHSS—RIP IT OFF!

It's quite easy and profitable to rip off a sole office for about £25 a week for about 3 weeks. WHAT YOU NEED: A sole office where they don't know your face, or address, nearby, and a bit of cheek.

WHAT TO DO:

Go to the sole office and make a fresh claim in a false name, the I.U. ask you for your national insurance number and say that you've lost it. They will tell you to get a new one, go to the National Insurance number, you haven't claimed before or worked before your parents are rich and they don't know who you are. You live in one week you leave school, but now they're going to live in Paris or that you lived on some humpy commune in Wales, live in a post, you can't trace, you are now living in a false name and receiving giro. Half used to do this in 3 different names and recibed 25% per week (a good working wages).

After 3, 4 maybe even 6 months, they will start hassling you for your National Insurance details. I do know people who have went away for national insurance nos. in false names and got them. But more than likely they start writing you for interviews about your past etc. You could bluff your way through this but it's best to just disappear and stop signing on (if you get caught, you could get up to 2 years inside). If anybody visits the false address your sympathisers just say, "Oh, they moved out a few days ago, I don't know where they went."

Unemployed steelworker Ivor Anderson: "Just about everything in the house is from the tip. My children go to school in clothes taken from the tip."

Burial shock for strikers

Coal hut killed

Two striking miners have been found buried at a coal hut near the village of Cwm, South Wales. The miners were trapped during a strike over pay and conditions.

One of the miners was named as Paul Wason, 14, while the other was named as John Morgan, 25, both of the same family. The police are investigating the cause of death.

The miners' union has condemned the death, saying it is a tragedy for the whole community.

Piss Off Rich Scumbag

If you think CLASS WAR! is a good crack then you should also have a butchers at PRACTICAL ANARCHY... Autonomy Press 4th Floor, 100 Queen St, Glasgow and SHEFFIELD ANARCHIST... P.O. Box 217, Sheffield and KING DEEP IN SHIT c/o 127 Thornton Rd, Bradford and also CROWND, 121 Hallton Rd, Birkenhead, Jordan, 8224, and ACTIVIST, Box A c/o 82 Dark Lane, Liverpool 17, and VERBAL ASSAULT, Box A, 4 Underwood Rd, Southampton and DEATH的GATOR c/o 39 Denis St, Chaddesden, Derby.

The other way I'd be had the money, say, if I was scathing a little factor you wouldn't make a profit and go the money back. The person you said that has the money, I just hope it's the person who really got it.
OPEN UP THE SECOND FRONT

state of play.

In the terrain of industrial dispute we can claim, without the slightest fear of contradiction, that the miners' strike has gone far beyond anything seen on mainland Britain. The mere wage structure this, with everything played according to the book (i.e., mostly non-violent except for court only) have on occasion erupted into brutal class war; are evident even for those of us who rely upon the slandering diet of newspapers and television for our mis-information.

So, what do we regard as positive?

1) Mass proletarian violence that has ranged from set-piece confrontations involving thousands of pickets and police, not only the classic push and shove tussle, but full scale riots with intensive stone throwing, barricade building, barricade building, barricade building, barricade building, barricade building, barricade building, barricade building.

2) Violence not only at colliery gates and power plants, but police stations in pit villages attacked without warning, police and some convicts ambushed, the birth of 'Paramilitary' Hit Squads causing vast amounts of damage to NCB property. Gigraphy outfits profiting from strike breaking and related activities have also been visited. Nothing within living memory has ever happened here on such an extensive scale. Not only have the police deployed riot equipment, but such scenes have become commonplace.

A precedent for the future?

3) The spirit of determination exhibited by the strikers, holding out against the massive police onslaught and scoring with such a sign of cavelling in to pig intimidation.

4) Allied to this is the fact that the communities in solid areas are standing together with no intention of blinking back to work defeated. The strength of this struggle derives not only from the workplace but the community. By community we dont mean the idealistic pipe dreams of some inner city children. But it is a vibrant living entity. The impressive involvement of womens support groups is a product of this.

5) As an added bonus, scattered reports and surmises, somewhat difficult to substantiate at the moment, have been percolating down to us that some groups of miners no longer care whether they return to work or not. Others, in spite of the obvious hardships, are enjoying the longest break in their working lives. The re-possessed video tapes set to music have caused massive outbreaks of despair contrary to expectations. Violent class conflict has temporarily freed a section of the working class from hollow consumerism. We've also heard that small groups of miners are beginning to show an interest in anarchist politics.

We don't see the miners as passive victims of police brutality. In the heat of class war many are indeed on the receiving end of police batons and truncheons but as far as we're concerned the more violence and injuries the miners inflict on the police the better. However, the strikers have shown extraordinary signs of autonomous initiative, ignoring union pleas to keep it within limits that have crippled the working class. Hit Squads, attack on police stations, incidents during the mass pickets such as the Greave are an indication, a pointer to unknown territory. It's not the purpose of this article to 'criticise' Scargill and the N.U.P. Sufficent to say that we don't in any way regard the unions as revolutionary organisations. The time for post-mortems will be after any sell-out. But neither is it our task to berate other co-readers for their rightful criticisms.

At this point we'd also like to mention some of the negative aspects of this struggle.

1) The striking miners are not questioning, for the nature of unionism, its role in capitalist society, the system. This probably won't happen until the final phase of the dispute, particularly if any sell-out or compromise is too blatant.

2) There's no denying that the police, in some areas, have constituted themselves into a virtual army of occupation, employing a terror so far only experienced by the rebellious young of the despising inner cities. The police have also had the chance to perfect the future strategy of state repression. Still, its better the pigs suffer their casualties in a genuine struggle than in in training. The strikers, not without cost (over 5,000 arrests) have also learnt a thing or two.

3) The terror of the struggle has tended to obscure a glaring fact. The miners stand alone. Below: we hope to indicate an untied path that could remedy this situation.

4) Perhaps the most repellent aspect has been the behaviour of the self-proclaimed leftist vanguard. Sweeping like trained hawks, they see the conflict in terms of paper sales and eventual recruitment. It goes without saying that the majority of these individuals are from a background far removed from that of the proletarian fraternity. Nevertheless the amount of demoralisation they are capable of causing is tremendous, perhaps more so in the wake of the strike. Even when performing what appears to be useful tasks such as collecting money for 'the miners' rumours abound about misappropriation of cash raised, some of it apparently being hived off into party projects.

5) Even more revoltingly (if such things can be imagined) in the attitude of the TUC and Labour party, whose leaders are more concerned with preserving British chauvinism than winning the strike. Kinross is even resorting to a form of left-nationalism in his pathetic attempts to curb the healthy development of class violence. Its 'Alien to the temper and the intelligence of the British trade union movement'. Nor will bail- out costs be minimal. Instinctively, if nothing else, the strikers are aware of this, yet still they listen to toleart Labour politicians platting on about 'Victory' at their rallies Politically the strikers have yet to make the break. But thats not to say it won't happen.

Masked miners hold jetty

POLICE today surrounded a jetty used to bring in coal and iron ore on the giant Port Talbot steelworks in South Wales, with 2,000 armed men but as far as we're concerned by around 100 striking miners.

The miners, wearing balaclavas, helmets and some carrying clubs, invaded the jetty off the mine and threatened the police with violence.

The police have been moved in under cover of darkness. As in other ports they described as a gesture in support of their work.

The occupation has lasted the miners have indicated they wish to keep both Fort Talbot and the jetty open for trade.

The miners, wearing balaclavas, helmets and some carrying clubs, have been occupying the jetty for 10 days with a concert of security guards.

The miners have been wearing balaclavas and helmets and some carrying clubs. They have been occupying the jetty for 10 days with a concert of security guards.

The miners have been wearing balaclavas and helmets and some carrying clubs. They have been occupying the jetty for 10 days with a concert of security guards.

The miners have been wearing balaclavas and helmets and some carrying clubs. They have been occupying the jetty for 10 days with a concert of security guards.

The miners have been wearing balaclavas and helmets and some carrying clubs. They have been occupying the jetty for 10 days with a concert of security guards.

The miners have been wearing balaclavas and helmets and some carrying clubs. They have been occupying the jetty for 10 days with a concert of security guards.

The miners have been wearing balaclavas and helmets and some carrying clubs. They have been occupying the jetty for 10 days with a concert of security guards.
POLICE fought pitched battles with rioting youths in North-East pit villages today.

Police in riot gear battled with rampaging gangs of youths.

Stunned traders spoke of an orgy of destruction with thousands of pounds in damage caused to cars, windows and a disused pump.

The trouble, which started after about an hour's quiet, was sparked off when a group of youths climbed over the pit gates at Ecclesfield, Yorkshire.

A plan to make the miners work was announced, and the miners were off to their homes in the pit villages.

The situation was described as chaotic, with many men and boys fighting with clubs, stones and other missiles.

At least 20 police cars were involved, and the fighting lasted for several hours.

The police eventually managed to clear the village and restore order.

In the meantime, the miners had gathered in the village, along with their families.

There were reports of looting and vandalism, with several houses and vehicles damaged.

The incident is the latest in a series of clashes between the miners and the police, which have been ongoing for several weeks.

The mining community is in a state of shock, and many are calling for an end to the violence.

How to achieve this worthy task

As mentioned on the anti-Labour front, we can cause thousands of pounds worth of damage without suffering a single arrest. If we're well planned and co-ordinated, we can make a real difference.

Judging by the size of the crowd and our co-ordinated actions, we can raise a force of at least 300 in London alone. This may be a conservative estimate. Obviously, we can't expect to run a model operation, but we may need to repeat the process.

Besides, we're not of the same material. In case the sceptical reader may wonder how much a plan could be achieved, here's a brief scenario. Of course, it's entirely up to the comrades working together that we can cut off the means of the operation.

1. Thanks to the Electricity Board publicising where blackouts occur, we could assemble in a certain area at a pre-arranged time. Any sign of abnormal police presence would mean postponement.

2. The ideal area would be a shopping area such as a high street. The crowd would have perfect cover when assembling our teams. Plenty of escape routes would be necessary.

3. If at a pre-arranged signal upon the advent of lights out, the mob could condense within seconds, the action would be more effective.

4. A plan by Loyalist gangs to destroy local amenities and shops would not cause suspicion during the winter.

5. Propaganda urging the opening of a second front with the attendant looting and rioting must appear beforehand. It should be made clear that these actions are a deliberate effort on the part of the minority and the police, in order to distract the public from the class struggle opened by the miners' strike. While the spreading of propaganda is an important task, we can't afford to dilute our numbers by having some misguided individuals engage in individual actions simultaneously as has happened in recent times.

Not only do they draw numbers away, but these alternative actions are not justifiable. Furthermore, if any of you are interested in discussing the matter seriously, now's the time.
ROCK ON TOMMY

BRADFORD

1 in 12 in Bradford

CAMDEN

Sex shops!Those disgusting places where they sell videos of women being raped and murdered and call it "film". We want our ideas back, not the ideas behind rape and sex. We demand DIRECTION and ACTION!

Some Camden residents have organized local sex shops on Camden Rd., to close down through a year or so of constant complaint, graffiti and brick attacks (even though it wasn't firebombing because some people live above it!). That particular sex shop is no longer open, which is one step we can take. We must support and organize local action which does work.

The owners of local sex shops are constantly threatened and given violent threats by a group of people calling themselves "The Lads". We must stand up to these people and show them that we will not tolerate their behaviour.

ANARCHY AND FREEDOM
CAMDEN STREET MILITIA

YORKSHIRE

Yorkshire

Shipyard workers defy court

More than 20 shipyard workers are still occupying 2 vessels at Samuel Laird, Birkenhead in defiance of a High Court order to leave the yard. They are protesting against compulsory redundancies which have cut the workforce from 3,000 to 1,700. The workers are expected to move out at any time but the men have barricaded themselves on an oil accommodation rig with enough food and drink to last more than a month.

Silly Albertina, chairman of the occupation committee said: "We will not be coming off these vessels no matter what happens." Striking miners from Gold Colliery, St Helens, have been to the occupation to show support.

NEW ADDRESS

CLASS WAR

84 WHITECHAPEL HIGH ST.
LONDON E1

GLASGOW UNEMPLOYED STORM

PRICE WATERHOUSE

At 7.30 am on Tuesday, 4th September, twelve unemployed members of the Clydeside Anarchist Group stormed a multi-storey office block in Glasgow calling to continue their struggle for work and against the destruction of the social order. The occupation was described by the Glasgow Herald as a "military style" occupation by the Glasgow Herald. They went into the offices of the Price Waterhouse firm, the millionaire accountancy outfit which administers the South Wales Miners' Fund. Within minutes they had turned out the security officers and barricaded themselves in the offices by fitting 3 millimetre thick steel plate over the doors and putting up barbwire.

With the police unable to gain entry, they spilled out their demands to Price Waterhouse: that the South Wales Miners' Fund be restored to them and that the firm would undertake no further acquisitions. Predictably, the head office in Birmingham refused to do either. Meanwhile two 60-foot banners were stretched round the outside of the block reading: GLASGOW BACK THE MINERS and UNEMPLOYED NO MORE. Thousands of leaflets explaining the action were handed out at job centres and dole offices all over Glasgow and news of the occupation was sent immediately to South Wales NUM.

In the late afternoon the occupation ended their action on the understanding that Price Waterhouse themselves would press no charges. They were granted the police and taken away to the local nick where the twelve were strip-searched and then charged with breach of the peace and offensive behaviour. They face considerable fines and will be on trial on the 20th of December. Since all twelve defendants are on the dole they will find any fine very hard to meet. All contributions to their defence fund should be sent to: Anononomy Press, 4th Floor, 6 Queen Street, Glasgow.

The centre working class must join the miners in making the offensive against the boss class, solidarity goes beyond just collecting money. And it's no good waiting for the power before we start causing trouble.
The first barricade police found was a burning tree across the colliery approach road. A week later, an attempt was made to clear the street and a police car was set on fire. At Markham Main colliery, a miner armed with a pickaxe was arrested for attempting to throw a bomb into the police station.

The second barricade was made of scrap vehicles, a crane, a crane and a crane used to clear the road in front of the colliery. The crane was then flipped over and destroyed.

Strikers would rather mine closed than work with 'scab' workers.

A fireman fights a field blaze started by petrol bombs at Kiverton Park Colliery.

Paramilitaries join pickets.

A return to work by a few miners in South Yorkshire raised the hopes of others. A new, more relaxed atmosphere was expected.

The worst violence was at Markham Main Colliery. Police blocked off the nearby village of Armitage because of reports of violence. A body was found, but the cause of death was unknown.

Pit strike 'more violent than inner city riots'.

Mr Tony Clement, an assistant chief constable, said he had been reassured by the miners. However, a miner was arrested for throwing a petrol bomb.

Petrol bomb found after mass picketing of plant.

A DOG training club has been closed down after a "siegel" by more than 100 wives of striking miners.

Airgun yobs join pickets.

WPC hurt as soldiers and youths battle.

A police woman was injured during the clash with youths outside the colliery. The police later made several arrests.