

SWOOPER TROOPERS

POWER TO THE PEOPLE AS DEVELOPMENTS FEEL CLIMATE PROTEST PRESSURE

Phew, what a scorcher of a summer it's been for climate change campaigners in Britain - with three climate camps, protest camps and direct action targeting both open-cast coal mining and coal-fired power stations. And it's not over yet as next weekend (October 17th-18th) sees The Great Climate Swoop at the Ratcliffe-on-Soar coal-fired power station near Nottingham.

This mass action is a follow up to the Climate Camp Swoop on the City of London back in August (See SchNEWS 689), and is buoyed by recent news that the development of the Kingsnorth coal plant - the site of the 2008 Camp For Climate Action (see SchNEWS 642) has been shelved (Who said direct action was ineffective?).

The Great Climate Swoop will descend upon Ratcliffe power station, the third biggest polluting plant in the country. Ratcliffe is represented as one the bastions of the new 'clean coal' industry by its corporate owners and government investors, by virtue of their promise that technology to 'capture' and 'store' carbon might be possible sometime in the future.

The technology to trap and store carbon is unproven (unless of course you just leave it in the ground where it is already of course trapped and stored) - and the government and power stations themselves admit that 'clean coal' power plants are unlikely to be available for decades, if at all.

Coal is now the biggest growing source of carbon emissions, rising some 20,000 times faster than at any point in the Earth's billion year history. And the UK is the world's biggest per capita emitter of fossil fuel carbon dioxide, followed closely by the US and Germany. There are currently plans for eight new coal-power stations to be built in the UK, all on the promise of 'clean coal'.

The Swoop is going to involve a convergence on the main gates of Ratcliffe at 12 noon, where a camp will be held for 24 hours. Bring warm clothes, tents and enough food for a day. There will be four blocks, including a mass demo at the main gates and others who will take direct action within the plant. Affinity groups from all around the country are set to arrive, but if you are coming independently the website gives all details including a map - see www.thegreatclimateswoop.org day Oct 16th, 6pm, from Old Steine, returning Sunday. Bus tickets are £35 (£25 concession), to cover costs, and are available at the Brighton Peace and Environment Centre or through Big Lemon Bus website. For other transport see <http://climatecamp.org.uk/actions/climate-swoop-2009/transport>

* Transport: The Big Lemon Bus is taking people from Brighton to The Swoop on Fri-

** Over the last few months there has been a bombardment of action confronting the fossil fuel industry - particularly the mining and burning of coal - including: the Camps For Climate Action (www.climatecamp.org.uk) in Scotland, Wales and London as well as continued protests at Mainhill Protest Camp in Scotland (See SchNEWS 692), plus actions at Ffos-y-Fran opencast coal mine in Wales (See SchNEWS 692). Elsewhere, there's been a 1,500-strong mass action at a coal-fired power plant in Copenhagen (See SchNEWS 693) as well as a demo at Hazlewood coal-fired power station near Melbourne, which is the dirtiest coal plant in the world (See SchNEWS 691, www.switchoffhazelwood.org).

In Germany a couple of weeks ago the courts revoked permission for a new coal fired power station in Datteln on environmental grounds. The E.ON plant was half way to completion and would have become Europe's largest coal-fired power station. Despite the German energy corporation being busy building power stations all over Europe - including Kingsnorth and Ratcliffe-on-Soar - it goes to show E.ON can be stopped, even on their home ground.

And it was more bad news for E.ON as this week their plans for a new coal power station at Kingsnorth were scrapped. On Wednesday (7th Oct) E.ON threw in the towel and stopped the development of the first new coal-fired station to be built in the UK for 30 years. This is a massive victory for environmental campaigners who have been taking continuous action against the plans.

With Kingsnorth on the back burner, next stop Ratcliffe-on-Soar... and then on to Copenhagen for the COP15 Climate Conference, December 7th-18th see www.climate-justice-action.org

BRIMAR REPUBLIC

The number of activists using incendiary Smash Edo style tactics to organise against the UK arms trade continues to rise (up). The latest group, joining other such luminaries as Smash Raytheon and Shut Down Heckler & Koch, are Target Brimar; aiming to put a spanner or two in the works of their local weapons manufacturer.

Last Saturday's Manchester Anarchist Bookfair saw the launch of the new campaign, going after Brimar, a company in Oldham producing military targeting and viewing systems. Brimar's controversial heads-up, heads-down display systems, specialist cathode ray tubes and in-helmet displays are used in wars in Gaza, Afghanistan and Iraq by Israeli and British Apache helicopter pilots, US marine tank operators and US fighter pilots. Although Brimar also has its civilian arm, the majority of its output goes to producing military-use 'visual solutions', allowing soldiers to aim and deploy their weapons more effectively. The company even boasts on its website that 'war-fighters around the world rely on Brimar products every day'. Nice.

Target Brimar emphasise that the company was not always as heavily involved in the production of military gear as it is now, and that it would be perfectly viable for the company to return to only manufacturing products for civilian use.

They kicked things off last Monday (5th) with a surprise action at the factory as a number of civilian weapons inspectors turned up and tried to search the premises. They also released a research dossier detailing the links between Brimar and the bloodshed and publicised their call out for a public demo at Brimar's premises in Chatterton on Saturday 17th October. The day's actions will be in solidarity with the EDO decommissioners* and will include a Critical Mass from the centre of Manchester. For more see www.targetbrimar.org.uk

* The decommissioners, of course, being the six people who broke into EDO/ITT during the bombing of Gaza and trashed the place (See SchNEWS 663). Their court case has now been adjourned until May next year (See SchNEWS 693) which doesn't much help one them who is now stuck longer on remand in HMP Horfield. Please send messages of support to Elijah Smith, XP7551, HMP Bristol, 19 Cambridge Road, Horfield, BS7 8PS

CALAIS-ING IT BARE...

Throughout the last week French police have continued with their brutal eviction of migrant squats and camps in Calais. A deportation charter destined for Kabul had been scheduled for Tuesday (6th) but was cancelled following outcry from migrant groups.

After police had broken up the Hunger Strike being staged by migrants (see SchNEWS 693), chasing the participants away, news came that the charter flight had been cancelled due to "Diplomatic difficulties". It later emerged that the French government had pulled out on the joint British and French flight. The flight had been fiercely and loudly opposed by a coalition of 32 refugee, human rights and migrant support groups. The British flight went ahead and 25 Afghans were deported to Kabul.

The next day police evicted the migrant camp at the Calais docks, arresting 55. They then fenced off the area to prevent anyone returning.

On Thursday, more than 15 CRS vans surrounded a number of migrant squats. Police moved in, arresting over 30 migrants. Migrants personal belongings were dumped into containers before tractors razed the homes, shredding sleeping bags, mattresses and clothes.

This side of the channel, the British government have also stepped up immigration control as work continues to ensure more cells are made available in a new deportation centre. The 245 'guest' rooms of an Arora hotel near Heathrow are currently being converted into prison cells to swell the number of existing places available at nearby Tinsley House and Brook House. No Borders activists staged a demo outside the proposed building on Tuesday (6th).

Word on the SchNEWSvine is that a week-end of action by international solidarity groups against continued police harassment is planned for the weekend of 16-18th. Contact your local No Borders group for more information on getting involved in the uprising anticipated in Calais over the next few weeks.

MADCHESTER REVISITED

Half-cut halfwits the EDL (see SchNEWS 693) are gearing up for another attempt at pushing their islamophobic agenda, this time in the centre of Manchester on Saturday (10th). They will again be met by a coalition of anti-fascist and anti-racist groups.

The EDL say they've held lengthy negotiations with the police and have agreed on a plan for the day. The idea is that EDL marchers arrive at a Weatherspoons pub at noon, where they will be penned in by police before being released for their march at 5pm.

Ever wary of the old honey-trap, the plan has sparked controversy in the EDL world. Many members on the EDL forum (the things we do for news and truth) are convinced the plan is a police conspiracy to get them tanked up before unleashing them on an unsuspecting Manchester, creating juicy footage for the vultures of the lefty press to use against them. One of the more literate posters said, "Weatherspoons is cheap as s**t for a pint/whiskey etc. Think they may want us pissed to increase the possibility of bad behaviour in front of the press? More chance of the odd mixed up gay jewish nazi tagalong seig heiling for the cameras?"

There will be a counter-demonstration in Piccadilly Gardens from noon organised by Unite Against Fascism (UAF), Show Racism the Red Card and the Muslim-Jewish Forum of Greater Manchester. They will be no doubt also be backed by any members of the community not wanting to see the fash marching in their backyard and anyone not wanting to see the fash marching anywhere. In the words of that great Nazi-battler Lance-Corporal Jones, "They don't like it up 'em", so get down there. See <http://lancasteruaf.blogspot.com>

* The EDL bonhead bandwagon moves to South Wales later in the month, and again will be met with resistance. On October 17th they are in Swansea - for counter-demo meet 4pm outside YMCA, St Helen's Road, Swansea. Then October 24th its on to Newport, meet 1pm at John Frost Square. Call 01633 8840098. ## YOUNG TURKS

As sure as night follows day, angry mobs follow IMF conventions. A joint session of the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank met in Istanbul this week to plan their nefarious scheme for world domination / response to the global financial crisis. In response, thousands of protesters converged on central Istanbul to focus their anger at the global elites' loan shark.

A crowd of assorted (mainly Turkish) protesters; students, trades unionists, and the full spectrum of lefty groups from Stalinist parties to the anarchist block (including the rather brilliantly named Resistanbul) gathered at Taksim Square. A peaceful start soon turned to full scale rioting when the police intervened to stop the demonstrators from marching on their planned route to the Harbiye Congress Center (where the bankers were meeting). Police tear-gas and water cannons were met with Molotov cocktails and catapults: running battles were fought as protesters weaved in and out of side streets dodging the cops. Over 100 people were arrested and several banks were damaged during the rioting.

Turkish people know the IMF only too well. Back in 2001, during the country's last crisis, the organisation arm-twisted the country's then government into accepting huge loans (it's only just managed to pay them off). Tayip Erdogan, the current leader, has refused further IMF advice, and the country's economy has gone back into the black ever since.

The IMF's blurb speaks of how a "fiscal stimulus amounting to nearly 2 percent of world gross domestic product ($1 trillion)" has really helped turn things around for the global economy. They have been promising "a virtuous cycle of peace and prosperity" (actual quote), once this current crisis has passed. For those who haven't noticed, capitalism is always in crisis. Crises serve as the excuse to fleece money from the people that make it and stuff it into the back pockets of those in charge of the global economy. Given that it cost $300 million in today's money to totally eradicate smallpox from the globe, thinking of the benefits that a clean trillion bucks invested in water, food, shelter and medicine could bring makes you want to take aim with that Molotov.

Operation Cast Lead and the ongoing Israeli stranghold on Gaza has given the owner of Gaza's only zoo a real headache after his (ok, somewhat dubious) operation was damaged in the military offensive. Some animals died and others escaped or were stolen.

Deprived of money and resources to rebuild, the 'attraction' has been ailing with the stock of animals left to lure the punters with in depressingly short supply - down to a mangy lioness, donkeys and some cats. Not exactly box office. So the enterprising head keeper took the only option he could come up with in the circumstances and hired a local artist to cunningly paint the donkeys black and white to look like Zebras. Hey presto, instant exotica. The tarted-up mules now apparently bring the kids flocking.

Presumably he's only copied the tactics of the Israelis who have been painting an apartheid wall as a picket fence for years.

CONSTANT THREAT AT DALE FARM

The residents of Dale Farm in Basildon are living on a knife edge facing forceful eviction from their homes at any time, as the council plan to clear the whole site.

The 1,000 or so Romani Gypsy families have been building their community, near Billericay in Essex, since the 70s and have been fighting for the legal right to remain on the site for over seven years. But, after the Lord's recently refused to hear their appeal case, eviction is now almost certainly on the cards.

Constant & Co, the unscrupulous, violent 'gypsy eviction specialist' bailiffs (see SchNEWS 669), are expected to carry out the eviction. It would be the biggest clearing operation of a community from their homes in the UK, at an expected cost of three million pounds. Gypsy Council president Richard Sheridan commented, "Even now the council could buy land for an alternate site for half the money being spent on bulldozing our homes. The eviction plan makes no sense except to racists."

The Government's Health & Safety Executive has said if bailiffs attempt to bring heavy machinery onto Dale Farm while children are still present they will be committing an extreme breach of health and safety law. An HSE official told SchNEWS, "If you tell us bulldozers have arrived on your property with kids around, we'll phone the agents and the council right away and send someone down if need be."

In August, residents and supporters protested outside Basildon town hall and presented a legal memorandum (supported by International Human Rights NGO Centre on Housing Rights and Evictions) showing how the eviction contravenes international human rights law and asking Basildon council to seek out other alternatives.

The only legal avenue now left is an appeal to the human rights court in Strasbourg, but this could take two years - time which Dale Farm residents don't appear to have.

Although Basildon council is required to provide land for travellers by 2011, the council has stated they will not be reserved for homeless Dale Farm families. Alternative places to live are not even being discussed in the council's so-called engagement talks with Dale Farm representatives.

The threat of eviction coincides with the launch of 'World Zero Evictions Days', calling for a new Urban Social Pact demanding an end to evictions and increased funding for housing, and the UN Habitat day. Richard Sheridan said, "We're flying the flag of the United Nations over Dale Farm in solidarity with Roma across Europe, who, like us, are being victimized, attacked and driven from their homes".
