POETRY.

THE LAST WORD.

To the editor of the Voice of Industry.

I am informed by a friend of mine,

That Woodfords has a new mill for the support of the laboring poor.

T. S. Wood.

SELECTED TALES.

A. W. Young, Editor.

“Nineteenth Century: A Tale of Nineteenth Century Life.”

A story of the life of a laborer in the 19th century, including his struggles, triumphs, and the challenges he faced in his daily life.

Woodfords, the hero of the tale, faced numerous obstacles, but ultimately succeeded in creating a new mill to provide for the laboring poor. This tale serves as a reminder of the importance of compassion and support for those in need.

Woodfords, who had long been a part of the community, was motivated by a deep desire to help those who were struggling. After many years of toil and perseverance, he was able to create a new mill that provided jobs and a sense of hope for the laboring poor.

Woodfords’ story is one of inspiration and determination. Despite the many challenges he faced, he never gave up on his goal of creating a better life for those around him.

Woodfords’ legacy continues to live on, serving as a testament to the power of hard work and perseverance in the face of adversity.

The following is a page from an old newspaper featuring an article titled "Voice of Industry." The text is printed in a column format, typical of 19th-century newspapers. The article discusses various issues related to industry, labor, and social conditions, providing insights into historical perspectives on these topics. The text is written in a formal tone, reflective of the period's language and style.
Address to Washington.

To the President:

I have the honor to present this address, which I trust may be acceptable to you and your country, and to the people of the United States. I am confident that your administration will be marked by wisdom, justice, and benevolence, and that your counsels will be followed with advantage to the republic and its citizens. I have been a faithful and zealous supporter of the principles which sustain this free form of government, and I shall continue to give my best efforts to promote its success and prosperity.

I have to say that the Congress of the United States has passed a bill providing for the abolition of slavery in the District of Columbia. This is a most important measure, and I believe it will have a salutary effect upon the public peace and order. I hereby express my profound sense of the necessity of this act, and I trust that it will be carried into effect with expedition.

I have to say that the Constitution of the United States is the basis of our government, and I trust that it will be preserved inviolate. I have the honor to be, with the utmost respect,

Your obedient servant,
