

They say waiting for bailiffs isn't funny, till u wake up throwing oil and shouting fire to them. Globe rd was evicted but not without awesome resistance. Much laughter has been had retelling the tale of oily clumsy bailiffs falling on the floor and trying to climb beneath shopping trolley barricades!

Lockfather Lockout.

Back in March Squatters in the old cop shop, Flint St, Walworth Successfully resisted an unexpected eviction attempt by notorious scum 'The Lockfather'. Using paperwork from the buildings previous squat incarnation The Lockfather and assorted HCE goons gained access smashing through the front door, dragging out the process of packing the house for as long as possible enabled some of the crew to get to the high court to get a stay of eviction whilst others occupied the roof. Thanks to the support and solidarity of neighbours and the squat community the situation escalated throughout the day, culminating in the building being stormed SAS style whilst cops and security were inside. They got locked out and the house survived another month.

ELECTRIKITT

Squatters rewiring a house in Shakespeare Road have found a novel way of doing that awkward under-floor wiring. Rather than going through the hassle of taking up all the floorboards, they got the cat to do it! In an exclusive interview with the Crowbar, one of the squatters, who refused to be identified, for fear of an A.L.F. reprisal, explained how she did it.

"We took up the floor boards where the ends of the wire had to go, and put the cat with the wire tied to its collar down the hole. At the other, we had a dish of cat-food. It took about four minutes."
