ABSTRACT: A bibliography reflecting Karl Marx's encyclopedic study of history.

KEYWORDS: Karl Marx, Study of History.

Introduction

More than 46 years have elapsed since Hans-Peter Harstick (1937-)

editor of the above indicated volume [1977], drew the attention of concerned readers to Karl Marx's encyclopedic approach to the study of history of human society, through a bibliography, located as a part of Appendix I within it. Wang Hongdao edited a Chinese translation of Harstick 1977; it has been published from Beijing in 1987 and 1993. A part of Harstick 1977 (SS.21-109) contains the full text of Marx's excerpts from Ковалевский 1879 [В 156 (Notebook CXL), SS.26-47, 66-90]. Russian translations of these excerpts were brought out in the journals Советское востоковедение 1958 (3:3-13; 4: 3-22; 5: 3-28); Проблемы востоковедения 1959 (1: 3-17) and, Народы Азии и Африки 1962 (2:3-17). These translations are now available on a digital version of К. Маркс и Ф. Энгельс, Сочинения, Издание второе, Т. 45: 153-225. An English translation of a part of these excerpts was published in Krader 1975: 343-412. A Bengali translation of the India-related part of it was published from Kolkata in 1999 (2nd ed. 2001)¹. The present text introduces and extends the bibliography in Harstick 1977, Anhang I. All abbreviations and references have been indicated after this introduction. All footnotes of Harstick 1977 have been converted into endnotes.

Since the publication of the indicated bibliography in Harstick 1977, a few things have changed in the world and, also in the domains of archival updating of the inventory of Karl Marx/Friedrich Engels papers, Marx/Engels studies, editing and, publication. Jäckel and Krüger published an updated overview of the excerpts reflecting Karl Marx's study of the natural sciences, mathematics, agriculture and industrial technologies, undertaken during the years 1846-1882, in 1997. The inventory of the Marx/Engels papers at the IISH, Amsterdam has been updated by Ursula Balzer and introduced by Gotz Langkau in 2003. It has been further revised by Eva van Oene for purposes of digitization in 2015. Wherever it could be ascertained without any doubt that the numbers following the Archival Shelf mark/File Signature B indicating the location of Marx's excerpts and bibliographies below have changed in the chronologically arranged related numbers, there the corresponding numbers have been changed accordingly. Elsewhere the numbers indicated in Harstick 1977 have been retained. The errors, if any, within the present bibliography may be removed by physical inspection of the relevant archival papers on the corresponding web page.

This bibliography is partial on several counts: the publication of *MEGA*² is yet to be completed; some of the source materials, their description and, related publications are now available online in the public domain; some are available only for a conditional or limited preview; some are available in a different edition. The corresponding URLs have been indicated in all known cases. That makes this bibliography only partially cyberdiscursive.

Since 1990 the editing of the Marx-Engels-Gesamtausgabe (MEGA) is being looked after by the Internationale Marx-Engels-Stiftung:

Political economy unfolds as a social fact, and Marx's Critique of Political Economy (as reflected in MEGA II) has also unfolded as a science/discipline, inside human social history. That is why there arises a need to situate Marx's Critique of Political Economy in the context of his study of human social history. The results of these studies of Marx have already been partly published in many volumes of MEGA I-III and, in MEGA IV/1-4, 12 and, 32; the rest are slated to be published in the remaining volumes of MEGA I, III and, in MEGA IV/13, 16, 20-25 and, 27-29.

Further, the changing nature and history of Human Society has unfolded and continues to unfold inside the changing nature and history of Nature. Karl Marx wrote in his Economic and Philosophic Manuscripts of 1844 (Third Manuscript, Section on Private Property and Communism, ||IX|, last paragraph): "History itself is a real part of natural history – of nature developing into man. Natural science will in time incorporate into itself the science of man, just as the science of man will incorporate into itself the science of nature: there will be one science" [MECW 3:303-04]. Again, in The German Ideology, drafted between September 1845 and October 1846 [A 10-17], (Part I. Feuerbach: Opposition of the Materialist and Idealist Outlook. A. Idealism and Materialism: The Illusions of German Ideology, I. Ideology in General, and Especially German Ideology. A.) we read: "We know only a single science, the science of history. One can look at history from two sides and divide it into the history of nature and the history of men. The two sides are, however, inseparable; the history of nature and the history of men are dependent on each other so long as men exist" [MECW 5: 28-29]. How Marx's understanding of the development of mutually interrelated histories of human thought, human society and, the rest of the Nature evolved throughout his life, becomes evident from his published and unpublished Manuscripts A1 (1837)-A115 (ca.1882), Excerpts B1 (1840)-B168 (1882) and, Letters C1 (1850)-C859 (1878). Hence the need to investigate Marx's study of history of human society in its interrelationships with his study of history of the rest of the nature and that of human thought – that is, together with his study of the nature and history of the natural sciences, technologies and other disciplines of his time [already partly published in MEGA IV/6, 8-9, 26, 31; and, further slated to be published in MEGA IV/10, 17-18, 22-23, 28]². Marx's mathematical manuscripts have already been partly published in: Russian (1933), Original Language (German/French/English)-Russian translation (1968), German (1974), Chinese (3 editions: 1971, 1972 and 1975), Italian (2 editions: 1975 and 2005), English (3 editions: 1983; 1994³ and its 2nd revised edition in 2018), French (1985), Greek (1987), Turkish (1990) and, Bengali (1994³); these manuscripts are slated to be published in the original languages as MEGA I/28 and MEGA IV/30. The results of his study of philosophy, languages, religion and other components of human thought have been published in part. The corresponding bibliographies reflecting Marx's study of the histories of technologies, natural sciences, languages, mathematics, religion and, philosophy will follow below, after the bibliographies from Harstick 1977. Since human society continues to develop in its interrelationships with nature, we may follow Marx's leads and, situate the ongoing Critique of Political Economy as a discipline/science, in its interrelationships with the ongoing studies of history of human society and, those of its many interfaces with the history of nature and human thought, through the various existing and emerging arts, crafts, technologies, sciences and, other disciplines.

Karl Marx's approach to the study of history indicated in the bibliography below may, consequently, serve not only as a road map in the field of study of history of human society traditionally considered to be a discipline within the humanities, it may also serve as a working model for planning the study of the histories of rest of the nature and, of all the domains of human thought, owing to its transcontinental reach and, transdisciplinary focus. If taken up seriously, such studies may usher in a transition from the possibility of a post-1990 Marx-Renaissance⁴, into a possible age of Marx-Enlightenment in the years to come. If that happens, then new lights may be shed not only on Marx's own research programme, but also on its relations with the older encyclopedic research programmes of the Mediterranean Basin Cultures, such as those of Leibniz⁵ and Aristotle⁵.

While preparing our new bibliographies for the study of various histories today we may and should formulate our own strategies, which need not remain beholden to the currently academically dominant patterns and divisions of historiographies, which have emerged out of the Northern and Western Mediterranean Basin Cultures in the last few centuries. The new strategies will expectedly reflect the contemporary perspectives of historiographic cultures emerging from the various areas of Africa, the Americas, Asia, Europe and Oceania.

Karl Marx approached the nature and histories of the different areas of human thought, human society and, rest of the nature in various phases of his life, through multiple overlapping and sequential points of entry into various disciplines. The present text is A Bibliography reflecting his study of history in the following order: A. History of Human Society; B. History of Rest of the Nature; and, C. History of Human Thought. These orders are not sacrosanct; they are products of a combination of some random events and circumstances. One may reorder them according one's own light. Every single title in this bibliography is a signifier of some text in some language; that is why all of them are objects belonging to the domain of history of human thought.

Apart from what was imposed on Marx through instruction provided in the Trier Gymnasium and in the Universities of Bonn and Berlin, he always chose the trajectory of his studies in light of the problems or tasks he wished to address. I personally came to know about Marx' work through the filters of the rivalries and disputes that raged around some contending Leninist interpretations of his political legacy, during the peak period of the last cold war, following the October 1962 Cuban Missile Crisis. I have gradually rediscovered Marx' texts for myself only after 1982, and especially after 1990, through some shared interests in philosophy, mathematics, India and, the sciences, in that order. I presume that everyone concerned has a right and a duty to restructure this bibliography, and use it to devise their own research programmes, in light of their own questions and tasks.

Investigations on Marx's studies in the field of history

[Translation of Harstick, 1977: 231-232:]

Hermann Ocken's remarks on the "intellectual biography" of Marx and Engels made in the early 1920s, to the effect that "They did not set out from historical studies as such, from which they stood remote and away, but rather proceeded from a philosophical-economic construction," still remains unchallenged.¹ Further, the report on "Historical Research in the GDR 1960-1970", published on the occasion of the 13th International Congress of the Historical Sciences in 1970, states that historiography is definitely not a peripheral issue for the Marxists, yet in spite of the "profound contributions of Marxist philosophers on the importance of historical materialism for the study of history" there are "only some pedestrian investigations on the historical-political concepts and on the historical teachings of Karl Marx and Friedrich Engels” awaiting “a fundamental work” that is yet to arrive .²

It is a fact that in spite of the numerous publications on Marx and Marxism(s), further detailed work on the Marx-Engels papers still remains a necessary prerequisite for any serious historical-genetic study of Marx-Engels’ understanding of history.

I have constructed the present overview after many years of inspection of the excerpts and bibliographies of Karl Marx and Friedrich Engels on historical literature among their papers held at Amsterdam and, of the relevant titles ex libris Marx and Engels. These materials are subsequently being printed as their excerpts. This is the first attempt at such a source based investigation³. It covers Marx’s comprehensive historical studies in detail. These studies of Marx constitute the substantive basis of his theory of political economy. Here it proved to be heuristically useful to depart from a biographical-chronological presentation of the materials and, put Marx’s corresponding “fields of studies” under the rubrics of the traditional sub-disciplines of the sciences of history. Thus the problem cycles were systematically captured as General and Political History, Social and Economic History, Legal and Constitutional History etc.⁴; in what follows, these materials have been placed in the context of the present edition, as pertaining to Marx’s studies on Universal History, on General and Political History of the Non-European Countries, on the Histories of Laws, Governments and Institutions, on Cultural History and Ethnology, as well as those on Legal and Social Philosophies.

The listed titles have been identified either as excerpts or as items in the bibliographies in the manuscripts within the papers of Marx or, as titles in Marx’s personal library. Further, in addition to the description of their contents, additional references to their respective location in the various volumes of the MEGA or of the MEW editions, archival file signatures, number of pages, size, format, date, origin and, type of publication have also been indicated. The details of the excerpts and bibliographic notes are mostly related to the Marx-Engels papers at the IISH, namely, to the stock of corresponding original papers available at Amsterdam, which have separate file signatures. In respect of the details of an entry I have generally followed the usual procedures of the IISH, namely, that of noting the author’s pagination described in the archival order, independently for each page count of a manuscript. As far as it is possible, I stick to Marx’s page count, which is always specifically marked. For further details refer to the former library of the Social Democratic Party/Berlin, the Marx-Engels-Papers funds of the IML/M (ZPA), IML/B (ZPA) and, to some other institutions referred. I have written about the relevance of Marx's excerpts and bibliographies as source materials in the Introduction to this volume, S. XX ^[4a] and, in the addenda to Notebook B 140, Appendix I, S. 215ff ^[4b]. The issue of their personal library has been dealt with elsewhere⁵. For information on the abbreviations of the literature cited and, on other abbreviations of a text-critical character see the list of abbreviations, S. IXff [the relevant entries from that list have already been indicated above – P. B.].

A copy of it was in possession of Marx; listed in Ginzburg, S. 382, 387 and, in Nikolaevsky, S. 402f. Whereabouts questionable since 1933; it contained numerous underlines and some comments in Marx’s hand. See: Chronik, S. 344 also Danielson’s correspondence with Marx, in: К. Маркс, Ф. Энгельс и революционная Россия, S.284, 288f, 293ff, 298ff, 308 and 310. Danielson stated in his letter from Petersburg dated 12 (24) July 1873: “In Beantwortung ihres Schreibens vom 22. März, worin sie um die Auseinandersetzung des Streites zwischen Belaiew & Tschitscherin bitten, habe ich Ihnen einige Schriften zugeschickt (Tschitscherin, Belaiew's Die Bauern in Russland, Gortschakow, Sergeiewitsch, Newolin, Skladin etc.) und außerdem die Literatur, wie auch einiges meiner Gedanken über diese Frage, und wo man was finden kann - angegeben." (IISG, Marx/Engels Papers, D 987). See the following titles.

Отчёт о четвертом присуждении наград Графа Уварова, 25 Сентября 1860 года, Санкт-Петербург 1860:

Отчёт...Читанный в публичном собрании Академии Наук Непременным Секретарем Академиком К. С. Веселовским 25 Сентября 1860, S. 1-25;

Разбор сочинения г. Энгельмана, под заглавием: "О приобретении права собственности на землю по русскому праву", составленный Профессором Ф. М. Дмитриевым, S. 65-115;

Ex libris Marx; in possession of IISG, Amsterdam; it contains stamp and signature endorsements of the "Bibliothèque Russe Lavroff-Gotz Paris". Marx's intense preoccupation with the title sent to him by Danielson in mid-May 1873 is evident from the numerous underlines, markings (by pencil and red crayons) and, marginal notes on pages 14, 20, 22, 24 and especially on 67ff and 119ff. Marx had approached Danielson in his letter dated 22 March 1873 with a request to supply him with "some information on the views of Chicherin, relating to the historical development of communal property in Russia" and also "on his polemics on that subject with Belyaev." Danielson replied on 10 May 1873 with an extensive report of 27 pages on the corresponding literature, in which, inter alia, he stated that: "Belaiew, dessen Buch "Die Bauern in Russland" die beste Monographie über die sociale Lage der Bauern in <Russland> der Geschichte, ist, hat, nach meiner Ansicht, viele Unvollkommenheiten. Erstens werde ich das slavjanofil'stvo des Verfessers nennen: es verfinstert ihm die Augen und hindert ihn, die Verhältnisse so wie sie waren zu betrachten. Z. B. die Zeit Iwan IV. Darüber später. 2) Ferner, wie seine Recensenten Oustrialow & Weschniakow es schon bemerkt haben, hat er nicht die Geschichte der Bauern überhaupt, sondern die Geschichte der Leibeigenschaft schreiben. 3) Indem er seine Geschichte auslegt, giebt er hauptsächlich nur Thatsachen, ohne Zusammenhang mit anderen socialen Erscheinungen. Er weist fast niemals auf die allgemeine[n] Ursachen, welche diese oder jene Folgen hatten. So, z. B., findet man bei ihm nicht einmal den Namen der Mongolen, während dieses Volk, das [das] ganze Leben der Russen umwälzte, auch nicht ohne Wirkung auf das Leben der Bauern blieb. Wie wir später sehen werden, haben die Mongolen wirklich die Grund & Bodenverhältnisse radical um[ge]wältzt, indem sie ihre Staatsrechtsidee auf den russischen Boden geachtet seiner Fehler, ist seine Geschichte bis jetzt die beste in dieser Art.” (IISG, Marx/Engels Papers, C 144 and D 986). At first Danielson was satisfied to send Vesniyakov’s detailed Belyaev-review to the author of the “Capital” as the entry ibidem S.119, “The original will be sent next week”, shows.

Ex libris Marx; in possession of IISG, Amsterdam; the title page bears the stamp and catalog number of the "Bibliothek der Sozialdemokratischen Partei," Berlin; there are numerous underlines, underscores and other characteristic emphases in Marx's hand (occasionally, by green and blue pencil), especially in the first chapter, where Isaev defined and classified in Artels [some cooperative associations or occupational guilds of ancient and medieval Russia].

Ex libris Marx; in possession of IISG, Amsterdam; the title page shows the stamp and call number of the “Bibliothek der Sozialdemokratischen Partei,” Berlin, cut at the edges. It contains many underlines, underscores, noticeable symbols and marginal notes (by pencil) in Marx’s hand, partially mutilated by the bookbinder’s cut at the edges. Marx remarked on S. 6: “[F]irst ‘artel’ contract (under that express name) has nothing to do with workmen [con]tract of partnership between three farmers of tolls (customs) [...] between two ‘adventurers in Siberian mining business.’”

Ex libris Marx; in possession of IISG, Amsterdam; the title page shows the stamp and call number of the “Bibliothek der Sozialdemokratischen Partei,” Berlin, where it remained till 1933. There are cuts at the margins. On almost every page there are underlines, underscores and Marx’s characteristic frontlets (all in pencil), but only a few marginal notes. Among the new arrivals from the field discussed above by Kavelin - Посников, А.: Общинное землевладение, Вып.1, Ярославль 1875; Якушкин, Е.: Обычное право, вып.1. Материалы для библиографии обычного права, Ярославль 1875; Laveleye, É. de: De la propriété et de ses formes primitives, Paris 1874; Keussler, J.: Zur Geschichte des bäuerlichen Gemeindebesitzes in Russland. Baltische Monatsschrift, N. Folge, Bd VI, Drittes Doppelheft (!) – Marx considered only Laveleye’s compilation to be slightly significant, without any emphasis added.

Marx's remark:

[Worin d. Character d. Indianer gepriesen wird; diese natürlich als Ungeheuer dargestellt von d. "Colonisten" (Span.), um ihre eignen Ungeheuerlichkeiten als

göttliche Rache an diesen Nachkommen Ham's (sie glaubten sich in Asien, nicht in Amerika) von d. pfäffischen Ideologen in Spanien "apologisiren" zu lassen, die sich ausserdem berufen auf d. Autorität St. Augustini, wonach d. Sklaverei zur Ursache hat - die Sünde!]

A few months later Marx noted in a bibliography, in connection with his excerpts from L. H. Morgan in B 162, sheet 1 (front), an English translation of this book published from London in 1604 that was published under the title "The Naturall and Morall Historie of the East and West Indies..." 4. The completed manuscript was in preparation for a long time. Parts of it were published in 1974. It covers the following historical sub-disciplines and problems:

I. General and Political History (Subsections: General History of Europe and World History, History of Individual Countries of Europe, Non-European History); II. Social History; III. Economic History; IV. Legal and Constitutional History; V. Cultural History and Ethnology; VI. History of Religions and Churches; VII. History of Languages and Literatures; VIII. History of Art; IX. History of Science and Technology; X. History of Wars and Military History; XI. Miscellaneous.

[Hans-Peter Harstick has indicated in footnote 26 on that page that Marx’s excerpts, bibliographic notes, letters and, the books in his personal collection need to be considered together as source materials. Till date the catalog of the amalgamated personal libraries of Marx and Engels could be only partially reconstructed as MEGA IV/32. P. B.]

5. See my contribution to the Festschrift for Manfred Hellmann on the occasion of his 60th Birthday, kept as a manuscript in Münster / Westphalia. 1972; reprinted separately as “Zum Schicksal der Marxschen Privatbibliothek,” International Review of Social History, Vol. 18 (1973), No. 2: 202-222:

and, the works of Kaiser / Werchan, Ginzburg and Nikolaevsky cited there. I would like to add that in the meantime a typed inventory of the “Books containing marginal notes by K. Marx (in the Archives of the German Party)” became available to me from the papers of Boris Ivanovich Nikolaevsky (1887-1966) [now available at: <http://oac.cdlib.org/findaid/ark:/13030/tf7290056t/>], through the mediation of Bert Andréas (Geneva). I have repeatedly quoted from it. I could obtain an important material for the reconstruction of Marx’s Russian Library, Marx’s notebook entry titled “Russian books in my bookstall” (the original text was in IML/M, ZPA, F.1, op. 1, No. 4099), only after my archival trip to Moscow in late 1973. The texts in this list of 115 items in total were perhaps evaluated between July and September 1881. These were in the Institute of Moscow. B. M. Rudiya has published the list in the Voprosy istorii KPSS, 1975, No. 9: 95-113.

[The publications indicated in this note have been superseded by Vorauspublikation zu MEGA IV/32, 1999; Berlin: De Gruyter. P. B.]

C. History of Human Thought

I. Languages

1. Speech is concrete and, language is abstract. That is why the study of languages comes under the study of human thought.

II. Mathematics

1. Marx's study of the mathematical literature indicated in this section has been reflected in: К. Маркс, Математические Рукописи, Москва 1968 (Eng. Tr. Calcutta/Kolkata 1994: http://cfcu.fc.ul.pt/varios/Karl_Marx_small.pdf).
