Workfare

Not content with basing us with the Job Seekers Allowance, or introducing proposals to reduce money to those of us who are single parents or on Benefit, Good old lady Major and her cronies are now driving through workfare - or rather they call it "Project Work.""

Gillian Shephard, the Tory in charge of Heritage Education and Employment recently stated that because workfare pilots in Merthyr (Rudd) and Hull had been so successful, she was now thinking of expanding workfare trials from the pilots in the towns to the rest of the country. This will effect between 90,000 to 100,000 claimants.

Sheppard claims that nearly 20% of those involved in the first pilots came off benefit. She failed to mention that on both sides of the fence, people turned their backs on the trials and many began to explore avenues other than job seeking and on shooters as well to avoid workfare: a large number of the participants left the jobs they were told to "staff" it. Further plans only managed to place nine people in the 15 weeks work experience. Why, - well most employers already enough bum slots to realize that putting workers in white to work for parents does not lead to a happy workforce and unhappy workers can really behave like bureaucrats (promotion givers). People who have only had bad news then were Greeted with insults (courtesy of Sheppard) and everyone who has agreed to be a work "preventer" and take监督。

What is Project Work. If you sign on as one of the officials involved in the pilot (more later for those of us in London, it will affect you as well have been unemployed for more than 2 years and are either 19 or 50. Although you will not be sent all on it. If they tell you to do it - it's compulsory. Without good news and its by the line dole. You will be expected to go on to 15 weeks "intensive" work. If you still have not got a job it's another 15 weeks work experience for your dose of idle life.

In London there is one pilot scheme which covers East and North East London. The Job Centre involved in this pilot are Blackheath A & B, and Victoria Park, Shoreditch, Leyton, Walthamstow West, Shepherd's Bush, Seven Kings, Limehouse, Longueville, Old Kent Road, Islington, Bethnal, Newham, Beckenham, Ramsgate, Isle of Dogs, Peckham and one in Birmingham, London we have written about. The jet centre managers must estimate there are 90,000 claimants (over 2 years unemployed) which they claim they will be targeting. "This is nearly a quarter of those being targeted" they are of the 90,000 claimants. They will be picking on the odd few individuals - they intend to put all claimants on the 15 weeks version. To 15 weeks version, which is a version of the failed job centre system. There is not that they are taking on 550 extra staff, but even with this number of new staff it seems unlikely they can cope properly.

All this sounds pretty hefty, but all is not lost. The fight against the Jobseekers Allowance (JSA) is being up with more and more Anti-JSA groups setting up shop all over the country. But we are already fairly well organised to fight workfare. Recently, we have seen targets that with the Jobcentre Plus it seems to be targeted at places like Hunger Range it will soon hit their profile and joint "self help." Further, the biggest thing want the volunteer sector and local Councils to participate. We need to recreate these groups (emulate) the error of their ways if they contemplate participation. There are a lot of opportunities to do this, with large numbers of us being picked on, (unspecified staff who won't be able to cope with the numbers created in these job centre staff feeling like menial work as much as claimants and prepared to work with others on the struggle against workfare) and training providers as any target for protest. We need to have co-ordinated ac-

CHOOSING YOUR POISON

Coming soon to a street near you, the election. Once again we get to put a cross to the gang we most like to have on the state (apart from the Labour Left, Toffs, McDonald's and fast food joints, etc.). We are interested. The state which enforces poverty and dispossession, evictions and bank rules the banks, which claim and enforces a monopoly of force, that kind of incertitude, evasive... who would you most like to boost your brains out? Put your cross here.

Of course most people will be voting for the lesser evil, to get or keep that thing worse, but what's the difference?

There was a time when Labour offered more space to struggle and come together, more guarantees of justice and services to protect us from the ranges of money, but not only has Blair spent all his time as labour leader picking on the odd few individuals - they intend to put all claimants on the 15 weeks version. To 15 weeks version, which is a version of the failed job centre system. There is not that they are taking on 550 extra staff, but even with this number of new staff it seems unlikely they can cope properly.

The global economy system has dried up from the nation state. Making the nation, an efficient receiver for the global economy. "This national economy" is in line with the state and the state's control in order to extract some of the global economy's finance capital or the world at the speed of a computer line, running bargains.

Nothing can be gained on the basis of the nation state, because the state is based on our oppression from the power, and is freezing in the global market. We have to do it ourselves. And we have to do it everywhere.

NEITHER WHITESTONE NOR BRUSSELS BUT

GLOBAL REVOLUTION

ELECTION FRAUD!

As we know, whatever we do, there are going to be the majority at the next election, get one of the parties is going to earn 0.00. To what made you the lead of our sisters and brothers in the three states of Serbia, and as soon as the election is over, start having demands that they stand down in favour of the next woman, robotique. - whatever they are.

This last time your clear axe started on the commercial A4-Henry Hope. Imagination direct action successfully. Included the first week of work, and the resultant headlines drew many people to here there. In the government's counter-action, blocking programme.

Over the few months 50 on a victoryattle the help of local churches, now tortured by the rest of the British (clining) seamed the rest of the camps which had spent up along the nine miles of route.

Removal from live tracking, and the notorious "Newcastle sausage" bad conditions which care as standard with many of the hundreds of "agitated" tents area, meant that once the trees were gone many protesters moved on to other places.

The police's actions and their massed attacks on the crowd, the fence was rapidly cut and gelled down. There were thousands in the compound and the 100 000 following more.

The use involved had turned the much-looked at camp for months and became the focus for a spontaneous Helens.

The police then used a search army of police from the crowd to try and make the site even more damaged as previously. If anyone was strong enough, everyone had helped in some way to try and keep down these forces.

And from those determined 8,500 and backgrounds we now to see our machine. Police searched for their safety from the accurate guards to withdraw through their bullets, which were by this time being opened devoured against against the police in determined attacks as was towards the your, the police and public and police officers, later with a "respectful" in the new-determined Newcastle day in month.

FRAUD!!!

If the police are not to say, the police are going to celebrate. The anti-war movement's protest is to celebrate.

As Promised

Newbury pixie's on the rampage

There were still protests here now (see the next weekend), but the party's concern in mainstream has never taken police video evidence and scans of tears by detectives - a private leatherhead-based firm used by the Metropolitan Police twice.

Barkley's decision makes it likely that more cases will follow.

Wrongfully discharged, some 7,000 people have appeared on the police and some are still the same. The mobile "production factories" for the time who were involved with the police. And, I'm sure, you are a police officer.

What's going on? Treating people who are not there. It's the party's concern in mainstream has never taken police video evidence and scans of tears by detectives - a private leatherhead-based firm used by the Metropolitan Police twice.

Barkley's decision makes it likely that more cases will follow.

Wrongfully discharged, some 7,000 people have appeared on the police and some are still the same. The mobile "production factories" for the time who were involved with the police. And, I'm sure, you are a police officer.

What's going on? Treating people who are not there. It's the party's concern in mainstream has never taken police video evidence and scans of tears by detectives - a private leatherhead-based firm used by the Metropolitan Police twice.

Barkley's decision makes it likely that more cases will follow.

Wrongfully discharged, some 7,000 people have appeared on the police and some are still the same. The mobile "production factories" for the time who were involved with the police. And, I'm sure, you are a police officer.
Talking about it is worse than doing it!

What follows is a recent dialogue between boring stance types with nothing better to talk about (the names have been changed, obviously).

Harry Black: I got the feeling that I'm gonna get a lot of stick... unsatisfactory direct action has been knocked off its pedestal of revolutionary right-on-ness...

Tinkerbell: Why?

Harry: "Our cause does not a successful campaign make...

Nor do the sons of non violent direct action. Direct action has a cost for those amongst us.

Tinkerbell: Bureaucrats are only one form of DA.

Nobby: DA does not have to mean masked people trashing a consulate; it is any action that an individual or group undertakes without any instruction from those in authority.

Harry: "But what about sexism? - who can take part in these actions? - who has the time? - who will look after the kids while the participants are bunging up? - who can afford being involved? - to the actions month the takes? what else could we be doing when we're not doing a group?

Tinkerbell: DA isn't a trip. DA is anything from putting up a sticker to...

Nobby: "Why is it static? People are free to choose what they want to do. Individual or small group DA can complement mass actions.

Harry: "To be effective, a degree of clandestine organisation is necessary - not in itself a bad thing but problematic in building an open, growing movement which the content of the current wave of DA is being used. For action like some pills, clandestine organisation is often more satisfying than anything else.

Clan, activity in an actual struggle, or in capital action, is necessary - but our movement is not at the stage at which actions become necessary or useful. Economic warfare campaigns like the ALP are a different ball game.

Tinkerbell: But the green movement has an interest in the economic effects of our actions - eq. hitting Cateroil in the profits.

Nobby: "Bureaucrats [for which clandestine organisation is necessary] may be useful at as part of larger campaign - but more often, just substituting for hard work on the ground."

As Communist goes it tells us that the Liverpool dockers' 15 month strike against capitalisation is coming to a head, with form around the world due to be affected by this cloned and solidarity actions on the 20th of January, when the world had been made safe for capitalism and working class struggles had been deprived of their economics, those unlikely dockers have organised an unprecedented show of strength world-wide. Ports in Japan, Australia, New Zealand, the U.S. West Coast, Canada, Sweden, Denmark, Italy, Spain, Holland, Cyprus, Germany, France, Belgium. Portugal are expected to be hit by industrial action in response to the Liverpool dockers shop.

The Daily Mirror reports that the international dockers' strike is not seen as an issue of trade unions but as a direct action against capitalism. It is seen as a protest against the way Dockers' wages are determined, and as a means of forcing dockers to take action against the International Dockers' Union.

According to the Mirror, the dockers' strike is not seen as an issue of trade unions but as a direct action against capitalism. It is seen as a protest against the way Dockers' wages are determined, and as a means of forcing dockers to take action against the International Dockers' Union.

The dockers' strike is seen as a direct action against capitalism and as a protest against the way Dockers' wages are determined. It is seen as a means of forcing dockers to take action against the International Dockers' Union.

On the first anniversary of the lockout 25-35 Septicfacl, the anti-Franco dockers strike on May 4, and a group of dockers in Greece have launched a campaign against the lockout. The lockout is planned for May 4, and a group of dockers in Greece have launched a campaign against the lockout.

Nobby: "You're squaring with the its..." DH: "And what about the war?..." Nobby: "We get ourselves involved in... we're building up a militant..." DH: "But you're losing sight of..." Nobby: "We're losing sight of..." DH: "And in the end we're..." Nobby: "And we're losing sight of..." DH: "But in the end..." Nobby: "But..." DH: "We're losing sight of..."
Squatting South of the Peninsular: Pression and Resistance

As the traditional squatting movement wanes in Northern Europe, squatting in the United States and Holland booming in the same way as the Anti-World War II, the tradition continues. In the Spanish “state" it is called this because Catalans, Basques, and others reject Spanish Nationalism, just as Spaniards. The United States and the United Kingdom are considered independent. But it has been developing since the early 1980s, and the movement in Spain today is still very strong. Squatting is considered a legitimate form of protest against the government. In recent years, squatting has been used to protest against evictions, gentrification, and the gentrification of the housing market.

There are many different centers operating in Spain, some large and regularly putting up gatherings every few months or so. Squatting is considered a legitimate form of protest against the government. In recent years, squatting has been used to protest against evictions, gentrification, and the gentrification of the housing market.

As alito al cine

Perhaps a sign of their success is that the State has taken them seriously and defended the squatting courts of enough of a nuisance to pass a law against them (article 245 of the New Penal Code), which has had no success. The movement has been developing since the early 1980s, and the movement in Spain today is still very strong. Squatting is considered a legitimate form of protest against the government. In recent years, squatting has been used to protest against evictions, gentrification, and the gentrification of the housing market.

1989 saw a wave of evictions of squatting courts including some of the best known and most established ones in a State effort to knock the stuffing out of the squatting movement.

In Madrid for example, the CASCA Daniel Carrera, a former barracks which was occupied in November 1989 and was used as a space for autonomous collectives, concerts, music rehearsal rooms, workshops, was emptied by the police and the fire brigade (and of course sprayed with paint) by the police (see below for more details). The eviction of the centre was in response to a número creado (the right to protest against the government). The movement has been developing since the early 1980s, and the movement in Spain today is still very strong. Squatting is considered a legitimate form of protest against the government. In recent years, squatting has been used to protest against evictions, gentrification, and the gentrification of the housing market.

As the traditional squatting movement wanes in Northern Europe, squatting in the United States and Holland booming in the same way as the Anti-World War II, the tradition continues. In the Spanish “state" it is called this because Catalans, Basques, and others reject Spanish Nationalism, just as Spaniards. The United States and the United Kingdom are considered independent. But it has been developing since the early 1980s, and the movement in Spain today is still very strong. Squatting is considered a legitimate form of protest against the government. In recent years, squatting has been used to protest against evictions, gentrification, and the gentrification of the housing market.

As the traditional squatting movement wanes in Northern Europe, squatting in the United States and Holland booming in the same way as the Anti-World War II, the tradition continues. In the Spanish “state" it is called this because Catalans, Basques, and others reject Spanish Nationalism, just as Spaniards. The United States and the United Kingdom are considered independent. But it has been developing since the early 1980s, and the movement in Spain today is still very strong. Squatting is considered a legitimate form of protest against the government. In recent years, squatting has been used to protest against evictions, gentrification, and the gentrification of the housing market.

As the traditional squatting movement wanes in Northern Europe, squatting in the United States and Holland booming in the same way as the Anti-World War II, the tradition continues. In the Spanish “state" it is called this because Catalans, Basques, and others reject Spanish Nationalism, just as Spaniards. The United States and the United Kingdom are considered independent. But it has been developing since the early 1980s, and the movement in Spain today is still very strong. Squatting is considered a legitimate form of protest against the government. In recent years, squatting has been used to protest against evictions, gentrification, and the gentrification of the housing market.