Goodbye ISO

The following letter was sent both to Love and Rage and as a letter of resignation to the International Socialist Organization (ISO).

Dear Love and Rage,

Reading of the return to private capitalism, the private ownership of the means of production, and the establishment of a stock exchange in Moscow, I study State and have been taken by Lenin. I cannot but acknowledge the fact that the state capitalist countries are returning to private corporate capitalism.

During the decades which have elapsed since the revolution of 1917 every country that has experienced a Marxist-Leninist revolution has become state capitalist, and recentl...

state for the old capitalist state, for historically this hasn't been the case.

Mars, Engels, Lenin and Trotsky, as well as many of those who followed their teachings, made invaluable contributions to the struggle against capitalism. Mars and Engels with their class analysis, Lenin on the right of nations to self-determination, imperialism, and the state, Trotsky's work on Stalinism and Jacobinism, like any humans they made errors. One of Trotsky's ways to consider the Stalinist countries' workers' states even though they are not controlled by the workers. In my opinion one of Lenin's greatest errors was the decision to subjugate one state for another. Lenin developed an excellent definition of the state as a means of oppression for the capitalists in State and Revolution. He correctly describes the state as an instrument of repression, however, he could not foresee that any state would become capital...

The Richmond Anarchist Workshop, campaigning under the tagline "Love and Rage," published in _Ideas and Action_ No. 13, as well as _Fifth Estate_ No. 3 Winter 1990, proves this is a problem not fully resolved in the libertarian socialist movement.

While regretting to respond to this issue further by reading _The Continuing Appeal of Nationalism_ by Fredy Perman, and _Lucy Parsons: America's Revolutionary by Carolyn Adams_ I have decided to support both Love and Rage and the Workers Solidarity Alliance. I feel that the criteria, the "cannon of principles" propounded and accepted at the Love and Rage founding conference basically amounts to sectarian outlook. People cannot expect the paper to publish the collected works of Bakunin and Kropotkin in every issue.

In solidarity,

TIPS FROM THE BRITS

Streets to honey, a prosperous, Manchester, England — People in Salford are beginning to fight back, and the film is definitely worth seeing.

A group of Brits (the '911') was made, showing the film to Salford's youth. When they arrived, the man in front of them was chased by the pigs and the pig mobile burnt out. This attempt was retaliation for the Salford riots, in which three men were shot and four others were injured.

QUOTES OF REVOLT

"There were jewellers' shops in Stockholm that didn't have bars on the windows. To people who have nothing that is protection."
— Joe STRUMMER, ex-leader of The Clash, concerning English football (soccer) fans in Sweden who looted pearl jewelry stores

Haïtians Hit Racists Regs

Haïtian organizations in New York and Miami have protested the federal administration's plans to deport Haitians from blood donations. The Food and Drug Administration based its deportation recommendation on the grounds that Haitians were not able to participate in the commercial sector of the country, a claim that is not supported by data. The U.S. government's justification for deporting Haitians is that they are perceived as a threat to national security, which is not supported by the evidence. The deportation of Haitians will have a negative impact on the health of the communities that they are part of, as well as on the Haitian diaspora as a whole.

FMLN: ‘We’re no threat to capitalism’

Recent upheavals in South America, especially in Brazil and Ecuador, have inspired the FMLN to organize a national conference to discuss the implications of these events for the FMLN's struggle for a new society. The FMLN hopes to attract hundreds of thousands of people from throughout the hemisphere to participate in this conference. The FMLN believes that capitalism is not a viable model for the construction of a new society, and that alternative forms of organizing are necessary to create a just and sustainable future.

No Soldiering in the Rain

STRIKES and demonstrations by East German soldiers have become common and possibly deadly. People have been killed and wounded in the clashes with police in the cities of Berlin and Leipzig. The protesters are demanding the release of political prisoners and an end to the secret police. The East German government has responded with force, using tear gas and rubber bullets to disperse the crowds. The protesters are determined to continue their fight, and the situation remains tense.

"When faced with injustice and disorder, I always choose to face it."

Piss on Unions

COPENHAGEN, December 4, 1989 — Danish headquarters of Unions in Blegdamsvej were attacked by a group of people who were angry about the government's stance on unionization. The attackers, who were reportedly acting on behalf of a group called "The Black Banner Brigade," threw stones and spray paint at the entrance to the building. The union leaders were shocked and dismayed by the attack, which they described as a violation of their rights and a threat to their safety.

Greet the IMF

THE Black Banner Brigade (POB 7852, Austin, TX 78746) is organizing an earthquake gathering to greet the IMF Conference in Houston from July 9–21. The gathering will be a conflux of town folks to come and join them.

The AIDS Movement: HOW WE GONNA ACT UP IN THE 90s?

BY DARIEL GORDON

AIDS MOVEMENT CONTINUES TO FLAG

The oppressed in society—AIDS generally hits those who are oppressed and isolated by the powers-that-be: the people of color, gay men and lesbians, women and children. IV drug users and the homeless. The government has spent far more on building bombs than on fighting AIDS. As long as AIDS mostly affects those whom the powers-that-be can little afford to do anything about, people with AIDS die or go to concentration camps.

The AIDS epidemic surfaced at the height of the Reagan-Bush administration in the United States. Unemployment, runs rampant, social programs are slashed; millions are hustled into inhumane action and arrest. AIDS is stigmatized and the lives of AIDS sufferers are marginalized.

For the past five years there has been a strong AIDS movement within the middle-class white gay community, where networks of AIDS education, social services, housing and healthcare are more available. There hasn’t been a conscious effort to build a long-term coalition with others who are affected by AIDS. The leadership of most AIDS organizations seems to see no connection between AIDS and oppression. They have taken on the right-wing philosophy of taking care of oneself and forgetting the social and political system.

The AIDS epidemic is being used by conservatives as a further argument against the rights of the gay community. Unfortunately, some gay kids are brainwashed by institutionalized heterosexism, and feel that we either should take care of the AIDS problem or close the bar, or that we deserve AIDS.

ACT UP (AIDS Coalition to Unleash Power) has had to replan many of its actions, challenging the powers-that-be in dealing with AIDS. The Food and Drug Administration has begun reviewing new drugs for AIDS. It is fortunate because of the pressure of ACT UP, ACT UP is the only major AIDS organization that has had an active role in delivering AIDS information to the public, as opposed to lobbying politicians.

People of color—gay and lesbian, of straight, women and children. IV drug users, poor and working-class whales are less likely to receive the attention they need. AIDS is generally diagnosed late. Housing and AIDS education is not readily available to them.

As an institution, AIDS organizations of people of color are slow in dealing with AIDS, often ignoring it, because they are not sure how to respond. There is no visible training of people who are involved in AIDS education and treatment.

The action is in creating a world where those who care about AIDS issues can speak out and organize in order to avoid the consequences of AIDS. The AIDS movement is an active and necessary part of the struggle for a world where people can live without fear of disease and discrimination.

National AIDS Action in Chicago April 23

BY DARIEL GORDON

ACT NOW (AIDS Coalition to Network, Organize, and Win) is planning a national action on public health issues and insurance discrimination on the occasion of April 23rd: National Day of Action.

During that weekend, a conference of people of color, healthcare, and AIDS activism will be taking place under the auspices of the Get Out of New Town Council. ACT UP/Chicago and the National AIDS Coalition will address the concerns of the community. The action will be a powerful moment in the struggle for our rights.

The action at the office of New Towns, which is dedicated to promoting and protecting the rights of people with AIDS, will be a demonstration of the power of people to come together and create a world where AIDS is not feared and denounced.

ACT NOW will have its membership conference at the University of Illinois at Chicago campus on Saturday, April 21, from 1:00 to 3:00 p.m. and on Sunday, April 22, from 10:00 a.m. to 2:00 p.m.

There will be a 24-hour vigil at Cook County Hospital in Chicago from 5:00 p.m. on Saturday, April 21, to 5:00 p.m. on Sunday, to address issues of quality healthcare for the poor. The vigil will include a soup kitchen, a childcare center, and speakers. The hospital is a typical example of the way our healthcare system is organized.

ON FEBRUARY 20, STRIKING
Pittston miners voted for a contract that ended a 10 month strike. On January 1, the United Mine Workers announced that they had reached a tentative agreement with the Pittston Coal Company. The UMWA then moved quickly to squelch those strikes. Workers from around the globe expressed support and solidarity with the Pittston miners. The UMWA tried to convince the workers to quickly settle the strike. We saw miners dressed for war staffing barricades to protect their interests. The leadership of the UMWA feared those miners to submit peacefully to arrest by the state police. The workers were willing to do anything necessary to win the battle while the union leadership did everything possible to lose the war.

The strike became more of an issue, one of which has become basic over the last few years as wages and hours were a few decades ago health care. In our age of high-cost, assembly-line medicine, basic health insurance is vital for a family. Given the inherent risks of mining in the mines, adequate health care is as important to miners as putting food on the table.

When Pittston Coal Company withdrew from the Bituminous Coal Operators Association (an organization of coal companies created in the 1980s), the UMWA held a protest. One of their first actions was to cut medical benefits to retired miners and widows. This means that retired miners, many suffering from black lung disease, had their oxygen cut off by Pittston Coal. This action was taken prior to contract negotiations and was generally perceived as Pittston's way of telling the miners that they were dealing with a new order. And sure enough, when the company presented its contract offer, it contained across-the-board demands for concessions, with no room for compromise. The workers at Pittston had two choices: surrender or fight.

Courage and Class Solidarity
The strike itself has been filled with incidents of courage and class solidarity. Students in the affected counties of western Virginia stayed away from school in sympathy with the miners, setting up aid stations to provide food and medical aid. The mine owners were forced to hire strikebreakers from as far away as South Carolina to keep the mines running.

There were incidents of brutality too. Several miners were run down by dump trucks, while others were beaten by strikebreakers armed with chain saws and picks. Miners were arrested and charged with criminal assault.

Direct Action
In November, around a thousand miners seized and occupied a coal preparation plant. With 2,000 supporters outside the facility, the police and strikebreakers were helpless. After making their point, the miners peacefully left the plant. It was clear that something was in the air.

Sticking points for the miners were the most visible contingent in a memorial march to Blair Mountain in West Virginia, where striking miners fought a pitched battle with state militia and company goons in the 1920s. By mid-December, the situation was critical. There was even a possibility that a short-term compromise could have been reached. The UMWA leadership event so as to seek affiliation with the AFL-CIO and facilitate a more centralized control of such a strike. But in truth, the business union leadership is more concerned with a general strike than the capitalists are. A general strike would give birth to new, more practical modes of organization, organizational forms created by men and for the people of the country. In the end, the strike failed, their options were exhausted, their limits were set, and the miners knew that Pittston was no longer interested in running their mines on a continuous basis.
McRiot Please, Hold The Meat

The demonstration was held in front of a McDonald's in New York City to protest McDonald's destruction of South American forests, murder of animals, use of styrofoam packaging, contribution to Third World starvation, due to meat production and sub-standard working conditions, as well as many other issues.

Shortly before 3:00 p.m. the literature ran out and the more militant demonstrators became bolder. The crowd had swelled from 50 to over 100. The chanting got louder and McDonald's was painted over with red paint, signifying blood, as a more dramatic visual effect. Shortly after, a McDonald's garbage can mysteriously burst into flames.

The cops did not hesitate to react. They began pushing at the crowd with the truncheon published by Diggers off the sidewalk. They pinpointed one demonstrator, a man and fired him. Another demonstrator tried to pull the first one away from the police. The second demonstration was pushed to the ground by another group of police, his arms were held behind his back as he tried to resist against the pavement. His face turned bright red; he was obviously in great pain. His wrist was fractured. This crowd shouted "Let him go!" Many of us put ourselves between the police and their cars, but the police pushed their way through. Hitting many people with their nightsticks in the process. The two demonstrations were then called. By this time the entire crowd was in the street blocking traffic and chanting "No Police State!" Supportive pickets by IATF students hanging out their windows chanted the same. The police announced they were clearing the street and began pushing people back onto the sidewalks.

The demonstration moved to another McDonald's. The police were not then to greet us, but when they finally caught up, they showed up in force. The demonstration then returned to the original location. After the demonstration wound down we (a large group of veggie demonstrators) went to Chinatown for our post-dinner. On our way back a demonstrator liberated a turtle from its purse-to-be-torturous death as soup. The turtle was quickly transported to Minneapolis where she will be released into her natural environment.

The force field has happened in spite of a court ruling that it violated their human rights as long as they remain in the area. The force field is a widespread phenomenon in America.

We at NY ABC were recently contacted by an inmate of Corcoran CSP-SIU.

What is daily life like in a Maximum Maximum Prison?

John Perotti, who, along with the other three officers, began a hunger strike on February 14, has ended his fast due to failing health. John ended his hunger strike on the 10th day of the strike. He said, "I don't have any information right now on the other two hunger-strikers, Rushford Safford and Michael Day. John has been transferred to another prison in Ohio, the Lebanon Correctional Facility.

Since his arrest, John's isolation of the last few years has continued. He is segregated, the only one on his cell block. He is having trouble both sending and receiving mail, and has been denied access to the legal library.

The only visitor John has been allowed by has been his mother, no other relatives, friends, or supporters have been permitted. John has written to the warden protesting these restrictions, but has received no answer. There has been a lot of pressure on the warden in the form of phone calls and letters. As a result John's most recent visit from his mother was extended from the usual one hour to four.

John is perceived by the prison administration as a threat to law and order. He is the only person organizing and legal work on the behalf of other prisoners. They are determined to keep him isolated as possible, but they seem to be responding to outside pressure from the public, write and call and demand that John be allowed to write to his family and friends, and to have access to the legal library, as has been denied to him. The freedom to receive and send mail, books and magazines is expected.

Public Enemy: "Tearin' Up The T"

SQUATTERS RESIST C.H.A. LOCKDOWN

PAGE 8 • LOVE AND RAGE • MAY 1990
Park gang rape of an upperclass woman by a posse of Black and Latin teenagers last summer. I don’t believe PE disputes the horrific nature of the crime, but they fail to take a stand against it. They do stand up to the racist media though, who used the term “Wildin’” as a battering ram against all Black youth. When Public Enemy talks about Wildin’ they mean against the State, not white (or any other color) women. But because PE has had shaky social politics in the past, they leave themselves wide open to misinterpretation.

Public Enemy will continue to play a very significant role in young Black and all radical politics. A new album, Fear of a Black Planet is due out in April, and along with “Welcome to the Terrordome,” it will include tracks titled “Revolutionary Generation,” “Who Rule the Sole,” and “911 is a Joke,” among others.

As Public Enemy’s politics become more sophisticated (“African Americans need to take a more global approach…” I’m able to see parallels with the American Black struggle and what’s happening as Israel and Northern Ireland,” Chuck D said in a recent interview) so will the politics of large numbers of African-American youth. Fear of a Black Planet could very well be the soundtrack to rebellion in 1990.

Black response to the lockout will find few white silos outside the RCP. The relationship of Fight the Power to the RCP is not yet clear.

The emergence of a Black-controlled group in opposition to the sweeps will not automatically sweep away other obstacles, especially those that exist within the Black community itself. Not only in Chicago, but across the U.S., many Black people from different economic classes are demanding more arrest and imprisonment of Black men to if the fight against the system is too big. Communities, many feel, should wage a more “monopolistic” struggle against the dozers.

For some, surely fighting the system is also understandable. Ganges, in the form of suspicion towards anyone who lives in public housing, mirrors the within the system power mongering of a Jackass.

But just as troubling is the call being raised from within housing projects, in Chicago and across the country, for greater police intervention.

current gang violence and drug war.

Many working and middle-class Black families have a legitimate outrage against the violence of gangs and the devastation they wreak on Black communities. Discussion about the underlying community devastation, however, is nearly nonexistent, and regarded as passé.

“Yet we have a lot of the same kind that are your ancestors,” Jesse Jackson has said to me. “It’s the hood in your neighborhood.” For many, from political leaders to intellectuals to homeowners to renters and public housing residents, it is as if there is no fight.

Hang this Power, for example, is the first Black group to emerge in this country that explicitly calls on “the people” to improve their lives by battling institutional injustice. Last fall, Black and white radicals worked with a group of Black leaders and others at the teaches popular anger over a police murder into community marches against drug dealers. These leaders were not interested in talking about the absence of jobs and community self-control that drives youth into gangs. In the short term, Fight the Power’s emergence appears a hopeful sign.

They could demolish this community symbol and replace it with a potentially hazardous research facility without causing too much of an uproar. Several demonstrations have already taken place and more are planned.

LITHUANIA FIGHTS

Michael Gorbachev is trying to establish independence in Lithuania in a credible way. On April 6, 50 Soviet soldiers burst into the office of Lithuanian Chief Prosecutor to arrest criminals loyal to Lithuanian independence. Shortly after, during a late-night meeting, with independence on March 11, the Soviets have sought to dismantle Lithuanian independence one building at a time. From the capture of Lithuanian deserters from the Soviet armed forces to the expulsion of KGB agents, the Soviets have sought to avoid a massive confrontation while they have whirled away the symbols of Lithuanian sovereignty.

For its part, the Bush administration cooperated with the assault on Lithuania. Vice President Quayle upheld the capture of Lithuanian deserters as essential to the maintenance of military discipline. This collaboration between imperialist powers offers us a glimpse of the new order that is being built on the changes in the Soviet bloc. Both Bush and Gorbachev have a great deal to fear from Lithuanian independence.

If Lithuania is successful in its bid for independence it is fair to expect that the other Baltic nations, Estonia and Latvia, would follow quickly. It would be a short step to national independence for these other countries. Oppressed within the Soviet empire, for over forty years U.S. imperialism has maintained a phony commitment to “nationality” for the Baltic and other new nations, but never questioned Soviet control of Azerbaijan, Georgia, Armenia, Ukraine and other occupied or occupied nations. This position is based on the fact that the Baltic nations were occupied in 1940 as part of the Hitler-Stalin pact, whereas the other nations were conquered under the Czecks. But their status as occupied nations for Independence for Lithuania could spell the collapse of the whole Russian imperialist house of cards.

For those of us raised with the propaganda of the Cold War, it may seem strange that the United Soviet States would oppose the collapse of the Soviet empire. But in fact this is why Bush has said the Lithuanian Western capital would much rather do business with the dependable central bureaucracy of the Kremlin than with the unpredictable nationalities of a down now state. For the same reason, the Bush administration supported the deployment of Soviet troops to Afghanistan in early 1990.

The collapse of the Soviet empire might also serve as an inspiration to oppressed nationalities around the world. Significant examples are important in breaking down the appearance of imperial invincibility. This is something the Soviet Union has relied on in maintaining their power.

With such powerful enemies, Lithuania needs all the international solidarity it can get. Supporting Lithuania’s fight for self-determination should not imply any illusions about the nationalism of politicians who put themselves in front of that struggle. In Minnesota, for example, the American Anarchist Bowling League held a demonstration in front of the U.S. Federal Building demanding freedom for Lithuania and an end to U.S. involvement in El Salvador. Uniting the fight against U.S. imperialism with the fight against Russian imperialism may be a way to go.

As the president of the Russian Union departs, the Lithuanian people must defend their independence. Without it they could lose the whole country to the U.S. imperialists.
Chinese Workers Arrested & Held

DESPITE the killing of martial law in the People's Republic of China, the oppression of workers and other dissidents continues unabated. The actual list of those arrested after Tiananmen Square is still unknown. They have, for all intents and purposes, disappeared from the face of the earth. The U.S. Worker's Solidarity Alliance has begun a letter writing campaign to try and remind the people of the Chinese regime that there are still many of us who support the valiant members of the Workers Autonomous Federation, many of whom have already been murdered at the hands of the "People's Executioners." WSA is asking its sympathizers to address letters below demanding the release of the following workers whose names we know: Liu Ching, Liu Chuanwen, Li Hufeng, Li Xiang. RESPONSES TO PANAMA INVASION

The Cuban-EC-SPACIFIC Movement, "Green Path" has denounced the U.S. invasion of Panama as an act of "cowardly aggression against the people of Panama." In its spokesperson. Orlando Poleo, also announced the group's demands for the immediate withdrawal of all U.S. troops. Green Path's declaration is the only official condemnation of the invasion that is known to have come out in Cuba.

Green Path consists of a network of more than 200 activists throughout the Western Hemisphere. These activists have been demanding in Cuba and abroad since 1985 against the sending of young Cubans to fight in Angola and against the militarization of the region as a whole. The group's demands include the withdrawal of all U.S. troops from Cuba, the end of the trade embargo against Cuba, and the restoration of sovereignty to the Caribbean island.

Green Path has been demanding information from the government about the U.S. power presence in the region, including the location of military bases and the number of troops stationed there. The group has also been calling for a moratorium on the trade embargo and for the lifting of sanctions against Cuba.

For their founding statement send a letter to OGP. If you are joining us in our efforts to fight for Cuba, send a letter to OGP. And please keep us informed about your activities.
POLL TAX REvolt ROCKS BRITAIN

THE SOUTH AFRICAN EMBASSY was set on fire, police vehicles were overturned, at least 36 cops were injured and over 340 people were arrested in London this week. It followed an English anti-Poll Tax demonstration in London, March 31. Over 2000 peaceful participants in the demonstration near Downing Street, the home of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

The Labour Party, the unions, the Scottish National Party were unable to challenge Thatcher over the tax. Labour leader Neil Kinnock made speeches in Parliament denouncing the tax plan, but official policy was for the local councils to collect the tax.

Several local anti-Poll Tax groups were dominated by dogmatic leftist groups such as the Militant Tendency and the Socialist Workers Party. The left was particularly democratic in its methods. Both groups were considering new members and pursuing their own agenda rather than building resistance around the country.

The English anti-Poll Tax movement got off to a slow start. But, as in Scotland, months of town hall community organizing began to pay off, with anarchist and anti-authoritarian activists making important contributions to the movement.

Secondand rejected Thatcher's ploy to "test market" the Poll Tax there. One quarter of the Scots refused to pay. Many did not register in the first place, and others stopped paying after the first installment.

Sheriffs who attempted to confiscate people's property for nonpayment of the Poll Tax were met often by crowds of angry demonstrators and would cancel the day's proceedings. In one case in Aberdeen, the police had to rescue the sheriffs from over 100 angry protesters. In Edinburgh 40 activists occupied a sheriff's office and had a mock sheriff's

Shortly after 3 a.m., another police line forced us down the street to an intersection, meeting little resistance. The cops continued swinging their clubs in Collegiate manner, sending more people to the hospital. Once pushed into the intersection, the crowd, exhausted and shattered, disposed.

On March 26, a group of anti-Poll Tax marchers in London denounced the 554 pound (snorkel) tax residents on the 10th floor of the highest in the country. The well-organized Haringay group predicted near-total noncompliance.

The riots this March were denounced by Thatcher as the work of Militant Tendency supporters. But in truth, the demonstrations were an interesting mix of students, housewives, anarchist squatters, pensioners, lefty yuppies and others. If the crowd were only Militant supporters, Thatcher would have had nothing to worry about.

Thatcher now faces the greatest political crisis of her career. Fortunately, when anti-Poll Tax sentiment exploded in the last weeks of the election campaign, the foundation of activists, information, organizations and community support to draw on which people had built for a year. At this point, it seems there will be mass noncompliance with the tax, with some sort of governing authority. Thatcher's political life looks like it will soon end. Perhaps a more important question is whether anarchists who worked within the camps on this issue will continue to work with broad-based grassroots community groups, or whether they will pursue ideas as a viable alternative within such groups.

Hey look! More AMMO.... ANYONE FANCY A BEER???

Wednesday that was well-attended by a broad range of people which helped to publicize Barrington's plight.

A week later, Juan Mendez, one of the 18 residents of Barrington, was found dead in the house's parking space. The cause of death was unknown and under investigation.

The Barrington police report was an important element in the unfolding of the forces at work here, and its implications remain unclear. The authorities are willing to go to the extreme to deprive this community. The brutality of March 26th mobilized all who witnessed it. The community will continue its fight for Barrington.

HUELGA DE LOS MINEROS
DE CARBON
ANARQUIA EN GRECIA

El viernes, 26 de enero en Atenas, Grecia, un grupo de estudiantes y trabajadores dispusieron en una protesta en contra del gobierno y de las políticas económicas. La protesta fue organizada por el sindicato de trabajadores de la Universidad de Atenas. Los estudiantes y trabajadores protestaron por la falta de oportunidades de empleo, la elevada tasa de desempleo y la pobreza en la ciudad. Los manifestantes fueron reprimidos por la policía, que disparó gases lacrimógenos y balas de goma para dispersar la multitud. Las protestas dejaron varios heridos y varios detenidos. Las autoridades han denunciado que los manifestantes fueron violentos y han prometido sanciones contra todos aquellos que han participado en las protestas. La protesta continuará el próximo viernes, según los organizadores.

Lecciones Sobre la Huelga de Los Mineros de Carbón

El 20 de febrero, mineros en huelga contra Pittsburgh acordaron con la empresa Pittston Coal Company, después de más de 10 meses de negociaciones. La huelga, que comenzó el 1 de enero, fue llamada por los trabajadores debido a la situación económica y las condiciones de trabajo en la planta.

El sindicato de mineros hizo una campaña en el sur de los Estados Unidos para apoyar a los mineros de Pittsburgh. La huelga fue un desafío para la industria del carbón, ya que la demanda global de carbón había disminuido.

La huelga fue un éxito para los mineros y se convirtió en un ejemplo de la fuerza de los trabajadores en lucha por sus derechos.

Liberado Preso Político Anarquista Soviético

A continuación una carta reproducida de Pravda (Liberado), #3 de 1989, publicación del Movimiento Libre Iniciativa de Moscú. Su autor: Sergei Troyanitski, un anarquista soviético, está en libertad después de una candidatura internacional, por su encarcelamiento. Sergei es un artesano y un artesano de contra-cultura (el) forma propia del Sistema, un grupo hippie socialista, equivalentes a los Rainbow en los EU que fueron mandados a arrestar bajo cargos de drogas.

Enmarcador en Nueva York, se encuentra Paul Knapp (Rainbow Hawk), un organizador antibelicista, anarquista y miembro de la familia Rainbow. Paul fue igualmente encarcelado por cargos de drogas.

ANARQUISTAS norteamericanos han jugado un importante rol en la unificación de los antiautoritarios del Este y del Oeste. En total importancia que representan Estados Unidos y lo anarquistas de América Latina proponen a la primera reunión de este tipo.

La asistencia del grupo New York University de "Ni Este Ni Oeste" deseaba enviar representación, sería una mejor opción si un grupo de anarquistas de Norteamérica asistieran. No creo que los anarquistas de Europa y Canadá sean igualmente capaces de ayudar a organizar una conferencia de anarquistas de Norteamérica y de América Latina.

Activistas Antinucleares de Europa y de la URSS Se Unan en Protestas

El 24 de septiembre de 1989, el grupo Peace Test y los índices de las agencias internacionales de noticias se unieron y coordinaron acciones con los anarquistas del Movimiento Anti-Nuclear de la España de los Estados Unidos. La conferencia de la campaña del Peace Test de Alemania Occidental y del Movimiento Nacional y del Paz de Polonia mantuvieron protestas en sus áreas.

Una de las principales de las protestas en el Reino Unido, el 25 de septiembre, fue en el Aeropuerto de Heathrow, en Londres.

El 29 de septiembre, un grupo de activistas se manifestó en el aeropuerto de Heathrow, en Londres, con el objetivo de protestar contra la construcción de una nueva base nuclear.

dido de desafío y desafío, lo que significa que se da cuenta de la masa. Cuando por Paxton Coal Company se retiró la Bioluminous Coal Operators Association (una organización formada durante la década de 1950 de compañías mineras con el propósito de pre-mitir al UMWA negociar un contrato para todos los mineros en el sindicato), una de sus primeras acciones fue cortar los beneficios médicos para los mineros extranjeros muertos con la enfermedad "putamona negro" y las viudas de mineros.

Cuando la compañía presentó su contrato, el contrato contuvo demandadas por conceptos compensatorios, en la posibilidad de un compromiso. Los obreros tuvieron dos opciones: rendirse o pe-lear.

La lucha ha sido llenada de inci-ció y llevaba a cabo acciones como la toma del centro regional de dirección de Paxton. Residentes del este de Virginia ayudaban a los mineros en varias maneras: la donación de comida dinero para financiar el uso de vehículos para bloquear caminos usados por la policía y los esqueletos.

También habían incidentes de bru-talidad. Camiones conducidos por esqueletos acaparaban a algunos mineros en los maleteros de la huelga. La policía del estado — muchos de ellos eran usados por
